Our Story

We are part of the 1% of successful relationships started by a dating app! That's right, we met online in spring of 2018 and have been inseparable since. We married in fall 2019. We know it sounds cliché, but we are truly each other's best friend. What holds us together is our shared outlook on life, including similar political, religious and moral views; our weird and eccentric senses of humor; our work ethic; strong family values; our life goals and where we see the future going; and our love for our five crazy pets.

What Brought Us to Adoption

We are so ready to be parents! We've known since we started dating that both of us wanted a family, but unfortunately fertility struggles have made having a child biologically difficult. We have always had an interest in adoption, even before trying for a baby. Sarah's uncle is adopted, and both of us have friends who are adopted, and we know it can be a wonderful thing. So it seemed like the natural step to take to create our family.

Our Hopes, Open Adoption & Relationship with Birth Family

More than anything, we want a child to complete our family. We know parenting isn't easy, but we are committed to providing a safe and loving home for our child that allows them to be the best version of themselves. We are very supportive of open adoption, and would love to have a relationship with the birth parent(s) if they desire. We truly believe it takes a village to raise a child, and the more people our child has on their side, the better. There will be no judgement towards the birth parents or families; simply an invitation to be a part of the child's life. No matter what, we will be eternally grateful to the birth parent(s) for the greatest gift we will ever receive.
